

Alex
Saltman
GeoOptics
Tom Yunck, GeoOptics
Oral

Since 2018, the CICERO constellation of nanosatellites has been producing high quality occultations from Glonass and GPS signals. The constellation now produces over 1500 occultations per day and has been selected to provide data to NOAA for operational forecasting. An update on the current status of the constellation will be presented, as well as plans for ongoing developments and future deployments.

Presentation file

saltman-presentation.pdf

Download to PDF